PREFACE.

A PRINTED Author Catalogue for the whole of the books received up to the end of 1900 is now available for the public, in four volumes :—

- (1) The main Author Catalogue (1869–1887), containing 51,129 volumes.
- (2) First Supplement (1888–1892), containing 19,099 volumes.
- (3) Second Supplement (1893–1895), containing 9,843 volumes.
- (4) Third Supplement (1896–1900), containing 20,755 volumes.

As it is not considered desirable to issue printed supplements more frequently than once in five years, a Card Catalogue will, in future, be issued as a complement to the printed Catalogues, by means of which the books received from day to day will be made available to the public as promptly as possible.

This Supplement now being issued—the third—contains a fairly minute Subject-Index of the volumes in it, and the current Card Catalogue will also provide a Subject-Index to its authors. A complete Subject-Index to the main Catalogue, 1869–1897, and the first two Supplements, 1888–1895, comprising altogether 80,077 volumes, has been made, and is now lying in MS., waiting for the necessary funds to enable the Trustees to have it printed. Whenever that can be done, the whole of the treasures of the Library will have been made as readily accessible for students as the skill of the Cataloguer, within reasonable limits, can make them.

With the Author Catalogue and Subject-Index as now supplied, the Library Assistant, or the student himself, should be able to find—First, any and every book by any known author possessed by the Library; second, any and every book or important part of a book, every worthy magazine article or scientific article of Australian interest found in the Proceedings and Transactions contained in the Library, referring to any definite branch of human knowledge; and every example of the different forms of literature as represented in the collection,—all being indicated under about 6,000 subject-headings in the Index.

Provided the student knows the correct author name of any book in the Library required by him, he will readily find it in the Author Catalogue, which, it must be noted, deals with all personal names, the books about a man being referred to him as the author as well as those which have been written by him. It should also be noted that the country or city, or society or institution, responsible for the publication of a book is technically considered its author.

If, again, the student knows the actual subject of the book he requires, he will find it, and probably others of similar interest, by means of the Subject-Index.

Students and readers not intimately acquainted with general library methods, and our own in particular, are strongly advised to consult one of the Senior Assistants in charge of the reading-rooms.

While endeavouring to analyse the different Australasian periodicals, literary and scientific, for the Subject-Index, we have not done anything in this direction for European and American periodical literature (except in so far as noting any article of striking Australian interest), since this work has been done, and is happily still being done most admirably, by Poole and Fletcher's Index to Periodical Literature, the Review of Reviews' Index, and the Cumulative Index, to which students are referred. Though the whole of the sets of periodicals and transactions, as far as they are possessed up to date by this Library, are indicated in this Supplement, only the volumes belonging to the period 1896-1900 are subject-indexed herein. Volumes belonging to an earlier period will be found to be dealt with in the general Subject-Index, 1869-1895, now ready for printing. It has unfortunately been found impossible, with our limited Staff, to attempt to index any of the newspapers, but we hope, now that this large task has been accomplished, to undertake a newspaper-index in the form of a card catalogue.

The Dewey or Relative Decimal Classification having been quite recently adopted by the Trustees for the Reference Library and the Mitchell Library, a commencement has been made in the big task of re-classifying our collection by dealing with periodical literature first. Hence all current serials and publications of scientific societies will be found to have their respective decimal class-numbers, but all other books have necessarily those of the old fixed-notation system.

This Catalogue has been compiled mainly by Messrs. C. J. Brennan, M.A., and James Pierce, and the final proof reading has been carefully done by Miss F. M. Rutherford, B.A. The composing is entirely the work of Messrs. R. J. Pride and F. Tanner, members of the Library Staff, and the machining has been done in the Government Printing Office. The Trustees, and more especially the President, the Hon. Dr. Norton, M.L.C., have ever generously supported me in my endeavour to get a printed Catalogue for the Reference Library as complete as our limited resources will allow. I hope and confidently believe that the students who frequent this Library will find our system of cataloguing, as exemplified in this volume, adapted to their wants, and will be able to endorse the experience of the Staff in regard to this form of Catalogue as a most valuable aid in unlocking the treasures of our fine collection.

Principal Librarian.
